Talks on Lebanon Break Off; Official

Reports a 'Failure' LAUSANNE, Switzerland Lebanese peace talks ended abruptly Tuesday and a Lebanese government spokesmen called the national reconciliation conference here a failure. Government sources said the conference had agreed on only a superficial document that declared an "Arab identity" of Lebanon, a strengthened cease-fire, a disen-gingement of forces and formation of a 32-member committee to study constitutional reforms.

A cease-fire was declared last week but by the ninth and last day of the conference there had been at least 50 deaths in continued fighting in Beirut.

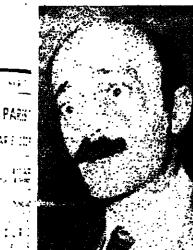

A member of President Amin Gemayel's delegation, Joseph Sadeeh, called the conference "a failure" and said the points of agreement were "a bare minimum."

lid Jumblat, following the Shiite Moslem leader, Nabih Berri, out of the hotel where the talks were held, said, "beware the Ides of March" - the warning that preceded the assassination of Julius Caesar.

Other sources familiar with the final negotiations said there had been no agreement.

"They can't say to the world press and to the Lebanese people that there is no agreement," they start in Lebanon. Mr. Jumblat warned earlier that

The talks were earlier reported to be close to deadlock over a new power-sharing formula that the Moslems have demanded to end the Christians' dominance in Lebanese political life.

Mr. Jumblat had accused leaders of the Christian factions of refusing to "recognize the realities" of Lebanon with its Moslem majority.

The Druze leader said that Christian leaders had gone to the extremes at the last minute to stir up emotional issues that would undermine the conference. He publicly asked the Christian militias "if it is worth it to die for these people who have their minds ossified by time and the fact of history. "We are fighting for a new Leba-

Push for Early Elections Gains in Israel as Party Plans Coalition Pullout

By David K. Shipler

JERUSALEM — A move toward early parliamentary elections gained momentum Tuesday fol-lowing the announcement of the small Tami Party that it would desert the governing coalition and submit a bill advancing elections.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir met with leaders of his coalition to consider tactics and timing. Government politicians calculated that they had little chance of beating back the push for elections and that the only question was the date on which the balloting would be held. The opposition Labor Party, joined by several defectors from the coali-tion, favored elections in May, while loyal coalition members appeared divided between June or July and October or November.

[Emerging from the meeting, Av-raham Shapira, a coalition member and leader of the ultraorthodox Agudath Israel Party, said the government might seek parliamentary approval Monday for a motion to lissolve the Knesset and hold new elections, United Press International reported. "Without a doubt, we are talking about an election in the summer," Mr. Shapira told Is-

Two other coalition members, Yitzhak Berman and Dror Zeiger-man of the Liberal Party, have advocated early elections. These five defectors, with the 56 votes of the opposition, which includes Labor, the Communists and the Shinui faction, would give the motion 61 of the parliament's 120 votes, just enough to pass. The house is scheduled to take up the matter Thurs-day for the first of four required

Numerous uncertainties remained, however. Several legislators were abroad, including Mr. Zeigerman, who was part of a delegation investigating the fate of missing Jews in Argentina. It was not clear how many would be returning for the Thursday session. In addition, the complex legislative procedures provided Mr. Shamir's government with considerable opportunity for delaying tactics, if desired. If an early-elec-tion bill passes Thursday, for example, it goes to committees that are dominated so heavily by the governing Likud bloc that Tami's votes are dispensable. Tacticians in the coalition were examining the possibility of trying to tie the mea-sure up in committee until the Knesset ends its winter session next is Stoph, crossed the frontier between the two Germanys in an automobile at the Wartha-Herleshausen checkpoint and was expected to go to a West German refugee center in Giessen.

Mrs. Berg was accompanied by her husband, Hans-Dieter, and their two children, a son, 7, and daughter, 3. It was not immediately known whether her mother-in-law, Olga Berg, also left East Germany.

The five Bergs took refuge in the West German Embassy in Prague on Feb. 24 to press their demands to emigrate. They left the embassy March I and returned to East Germany after receiving assurances that they would be permitted to resettle in the West.

Shultz Says Criticism Of U.S. by Hussein Endangers Missile Deal

By John M. Goshko

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday criticism of the United States by King Hussein had dealt "a seri-ous sethack" to President Ronald Reagan's hopes of selling Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan and coaxing Hussein toward Middle East peace talks with Israel.

At a news conference, Mr. Shultz pointedly declined to defend the tinger sale in the wake of Hussein's unexpected denunciation of U.S. policy. Instead Mr. Shultz's answers contained a strong implication that the administration believes Hussein has closed the door on efforts to offset U.S. reverses in Lebanon through a special new relationship with Jordan.
Hussein said last week that the United States, through one-sided support for Israel, had lost its credibility as a Middle East mediator. Referring to the planned sale of 1,613 Stingers to Jordan, Mr.

Bonn, Moscow Agree on Plan For Embassies

The Associated Press BONN - Ten years after West Germany and the Soviet Union swapped building sites, the two governments finally agreed on plans to erect new ambassies in their respective capitals, the Bonn Foreign Ministry said Tuesday.

On Monday, Bonn informed the Soviet Embassy that it can build on a site at Viktorshöhe in the Bad Godesberg residential district, the spokesman said. The West Germans plan to start building on Moscow's Lenin Hills April 1. Construction of a new legation will take about five years and cost more than 100 million Deutsche marks

($39 million), he said. Andrei Seryogin, the Soviet Embassy spokesman, said construction of new offices, staff apartments and a tennis court will begin in two to three weeks. The Soviet complex is to be built in two phases, he said, with the first costing an estimated 30 million Deutsche would remain intact.

Shultz said: "There's no question about the fact that King Hussein's statement constitutes a very serious setback to chances of congressional approval of that."

Administration sources said that while some senior officials like Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger still favored the sale. Mr. Shultz's comments could be inter-preted as a signal to Congress that the administration is willing to back away in exchange for granting Mr. Reagan's request for emergen-cy military aid to El Salvador, cooperating with a separate plan to help Jordan create a mobile military force for the Gulf and defeating legislation that would recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel.

Questioned about the administration's broader Middle East objectives, Mr. Shultz, in effect, conceded that Hussein's position has ended any lingering hopes of reviv-ing Mr. Reagan's moribund Middle East peace initiative. He also made clear that U.S. policy in the region is likely to be put on the shelf until after the presidential election.

The international human rights group said prisoners told an Amnesty mission sent to the Archambault Prison north of Montreal that they had been beaten and had tear gas sprayed in their mouths by guards.

WORLD BRIEFS

Scargill Sees 'Police State' Methods

LONDON (UPI) — The head of the British Minerworkers Union, Arthur Scargill, accused the government Tuesday of treating the coalfields like a "police state" by deploying thousands of policemen to cool off Britain's coal strike.

About 8 000 rediscores beginning to

About 8,000 policemen brought in from all over the country Tuesday guarded about 40,000 of the country's 175,000 coal miners who worked in deliance of strike calls from the national union leadership and threats of disruption from militant miners. In a radio interview, Mr. Scargill said the police presence was "making the north Nottinghamshire and north Derbyshire areas almost like a police state."

Strikers manned picket lines Tuesday, but police said there were no iolent incidents and miners who wanted to work were able to do so, It was the second day of the large-scale police operation. The National Coal Board said 42 of Britain's 174 coal mines were operating normally on the morning shift and a further eight were "producing some coal."

India Navy Intervenes in Dock Strike

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — A national longshoremen's strike that has paralyzed India's ports entered a critical phase Tuesday as the navy ntervened to move essential supplies.

Leaders of the 300,000 striking workers, who are seeking a 40-percent pay raise, said they had gained support from other Indian trade unions.

The Press Trust of India quoted dockers' leaders as saying that about 15,000 civilian workers in Bombay's naval yard and 10,000 print workers

More than 160 ships were waiting to off-load fuel, raw materials and grain as the six-day-old strike began to affect food supplies destined for the drought-ridden southern part of the country, according to government officials. Navy personnel manned tugs to bring coal ashore at Tuticorin in the southern state of Tamil Nadu. The Bombay naval chief. Commodore P.K. Gupta, said his men were standing by to clear cargo from stranded ships in Bombay and Calcutta.

India Charges Top Sikh With Sedition

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The Indian government on Tuesday charged the top Sikh political leader with sedition, and police arrested more than 100 activists of an outlawed Sikh group in a sweep through Punjab state. The sedition charge was filed against Harchand Singh Longowal, who heads the Akali Dal party. He is accused of making damaging remarks in an open letter to the Commonwealth summit here last November. It was the first criminal charge against Mr. Longowal, who has directed an increasingly violent campaign for Sikh autonomy in the Punjab.

The action followed the announcement of a government ban of the All India Sikhs' Student Federation, the student wing of the Sikh political party. Both Mr. Longowal and leaders of the student group remained sheltered in the Golden Temple, the Sikhs' holiest shrine, at Amritsar. More than 100 activists of the student group were arrested Tuesday.

Huge Colombian Drug Raid Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colombian police have raided a jungle cocaine processing plant operating under Communist protection and seized 12,500 kilograms (about 27,500 pounds) of cocaine, U.S. Ambassador Lewis A. Tambs said Tuesday.

Mr. Tambs called it the "largest drug raid ever in the world." He said police, accompanied by a U.S. Embassy observer, began the raid on March 10 and arrested 40 persons, including a U.S. pilot, at 10 remote

The ambassador said the cocaine operation was under the protection of the armed wing of the Colombian Communist Party, which U.S. officials called "the largest, oldest, best-equipped, best-trained and potentially most dangerous subversive group in Colombia." Mr. Tambs said one sale contained 44 wooden structures and five runways, some equipped with lights for night landings. Seven aircraft, including two twin-engine planes and a helicopter, also were seized, he said.

Egypt Warns Libya Over Sudan Raid

CAIRO (UPI) — President Hosni Mubarak warned Tuesday against: any violation of Egyptian or Sudanese defenses as Libya threatened to shoot down two U.S. AWACS surveillance planes. "We are cautious and we are ready to do anything. We will not allow any violation of our borders under any circumstances," hesaid.

The U.S. aircraft were dispatched to Egypt Monday to track Libyan air-activity following Friday's raid on Omdurman, a suburb of the Sudanese capital of Khartoum, in which five persons were killed and 14 injured Mr. Mubarak said the aircraft "will fly mainly in Egyptian air space. We have not decided yet whether they wil fly over Sudanese territory."

The New York Times quoted the State Department spokesman, Alan-D. Romberg, as saying that a note was sent to Libya warning the government of Colonel Moamer Qadhafi not to interfere with the AWACS. Mr. Romberg said the planes would stay in Egypt indefinitely.

China Sees Reagan Visit Helping Ties BELJING (LAT) — China expects President Ronald Reagan's visit here late next month to put Chinese-American relations "back on course" after more than three years of often sharp differences, Prime Minister.

Zhao Ziyang told the U.S. Treasury secretary, Donald T. Regan, here.

Mr. Zhao, who visited the United States in January, stressed the. Chinese hope that Mr. Reagan's trip, the first by a U.S. president in nearly a decade, would "raise relations to a new level," American officials said in recounting Tuesday's meeting.

Sharp criticism of the United States, particularly of its trade policies had appeared in the Chinese news media at the start of Mr. Regan's taks in Beijing. But China agreed Tuesday to an exchange of negotiating teams that is expected to lead to the signing during Mr. Reagan's visit of an agreement protecting U.S. companies that operate in China. On Wednesday, Mr. Regan and Chinese officials will initial a tax treaty.

The threat, issued on the rebels' Radio Venceremos, coincided with a government military campaign by the Marxist-led guerrilla movement against the election.

Guerrillas early Tuesday set up roadblocks at Miraflores, a hamlet on the Pan-American Highway about 90 miles (145 kilometers) east of San Salvador. They stopped motorists, demanded their government identification cards and sent them on their way.

Spokesmen for the country's bus companies also said the guerrillas ordered a halt to all transportation in the eastern sector of the country from Tuesday through election day. The owner of a gasoline sta-tion in San Miguel, a major city in the region, said traffic had "sub-

A Senate amendment sponsored by Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina, sets new licensing requirements on technical data, such as blueprints, for oil drilling equipment or new factories sold only to China. It would affect about 40 percent of U.S. exports to China and could complicate President Ronald Reagan's visit to Beijng next month. The overall legislation would revamp the Export Administration Act, the law that sets the terms under which presidents may embargo exports of grain, advanced technology and other products.

Now you will arrive in style on a Finnair MD-83 jetliner.

Finnair has ordered two new MD-83 lettiners, the first of this advanced type to be selected for service in Europe. The MD-83 is especially designed for long flights to small airfields at high altitudes in warm climates-just where vacationers like to go.

On Finnair, the passenger is number one. That's why Finnair chose MD-80 jets, like 28 other major airlines. Finnair passengers like the quiet of its cabin. The airline likes its low noise levels for airport operations. They have been pleased with its fuel efficiency and impressed with its reliability.

Finnair was aware that for comfort and interior design, passengers prefer MD-80s by as much as eight to one over other jets of comparable size. Now, with MD-83s, Finnair will be able to bring even better service to their passengers.

The MD-80 family of jettiners. It is becoming the choice for airlines and air travelers everywhere.

U.S. Export Control

The most valued allies of the United States have joined in a vehement protest against the bills to renew the Export Administration Act.

The legislation is a clumsy and abrasive attempt to impose American policy on other countries' trade with the Soviet Union. The Western Europeans heatedly argue that the Reagan administration is trying to compel them to accept exaggerated and unwarranted definitions of what's sensitive.

Both houses of Congress have passed bills. and they go to conference next week. The European Community. Canada, Japan and Australia have joined in urging changes. One question is whether the French subsidiary, for example, of a U.S. company is to obey American law or French law when it exports from France. The bills would have American law prevail. You can imagine the French response. Still more inflammatory, the Senate version would authorize the federal government here to retaliate with import penalties against a country that violates the American rules. Other countries see these provisions, accurately, as infringement of their sovereignty.

This unwise legislation is reviving all the divisions that the Reagan administration created two years ago when it tried to use this kind of authority, under earlier legislation now expired, to force Western Europe to drop its plans for a natural gas pipeline from Siberia. The administration wasn't seriously claiming that the pipeline technology was secret, or that it had military value. It was defining the pipe-line as sensitive because it felt that the line would benefit the Russians. The Europeans felt otherwise and, with much ill will on both sides, proceeded with the project.

This quarrel goes far beyond conventional military security. The Europeans fear that the Reagan administration truly believes that a worldwide campaign to cut off foreign tech-nology of all sorts, including electronic equipment that you can buy off the shelf in Hong Kong, can diminish Soviet strength and increase internal Soviet strains. Hardly anyone in Europe agrees. To the contrary, Europeans generally think that trade with the Russians strengthens the cause of peace.

As for genuine strategic goods, they sourly observe that the Reagan administration is working hard to increase its sales to the Russians of one of the most strategic of all goods
- American grain. If basic foodstuffs are permissible, why not French and German manufactured goods? The legislation, as it goes to conference, contains the seeds of uncontrollable and damaging dissension among allied governments that, in a dangerous world, need to work together.

Rose Garden Illusions

Stepping into the Rose Garden, surrounded by Republican congressmen. President Reagan announced the second version of his budget for next year. The first version went to Congress six weeks ago, but Mr. Reagan had disavowed it before it was delivered.

At the time, he airily told Congress that if anyone had any suggestions to offer he would certainly be glad to listen to them. Some of the tougher and more intrepid spirits among the Republican senators — notably Pete Domeni-ci and Robert Dole — have taken him up on it and have spent an arduous month trying to extract concessions from the White House on a budget that is, in traditional Republican terms, a catastrophe.

This, after all. is the year when Mr. Reagan had promised the budget would be balanced. Instead, the budget that went to Congress showed a deficit, including off-budget spending, that would be $200 billion this year and $195 billion next year. This is the president who promised to bring down federal spending. Instead, federal spending last year was the highest by any measure since World War II; this year it is supposed to be slightly lower but. even by the administration's own optimistic calculations, it will remain substantially higher than at any time in the Carter administration. The new version of the budget contains enough small tax increases and spending cuts to diminish that $195 billion deficit next year by $11 billion. That is pretty modest progress. The figure of $11 billion is smaller than the probable error in the $200 billion estimate, and hardly enough to affect the economy one way or the other. But it is not a trivial amount - and in forcing the president to it, the Republicans in Congress have won an extremely important point. They have extracted a significant reduc-tion in the president's overstuffed projections

One is entitled to a degree of doubt that the White House is dealing here in good faith—and that the congressional Republicans can make the bargain stick. Administration officials carefully explained that the cuts will not affect spending on procurement for major weapons. The implication is that the Pentagon. by taking all of the reductions out of the funds for current operations, maintenance and soldiers' pay, will keep trying to force Congress to back off. But that is another battle for another day. The senators have made a genuine contribution, and deserve credit for it. Mr. Reagan will now press his revised budget on the Democrats with the intention, if they accept it, of advertising the $11 billion as a "down payment" on the deficit. That term is absurd. The suggestion that this small decrease somehow opens the way to a larger resolution of the deficit is simply wrong. Voters might more sensibly ask why the deficit is now twice as large as it was when Mr. Carter left office and why Mr. Reagan, like Mr. Carter in 1980, seems to have no ideas about what to do next.

-THE WASHINGTON POST.

If Reagan Could Just Count . . .

By Robert Bendiner

TUNTINGTON, New York - If President Reagan, like most of us. is more at home with simple arithmetic than with statistics, he must wonder why anyone should think he will win re-election easily.

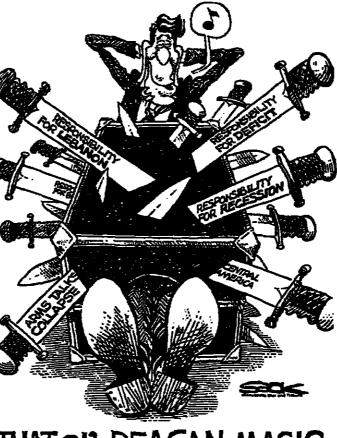

Admittedly 1984 is different from the great upset year of 1948, when President Harry S. Truman was the underdog instead of the sure thing. but the two campaigns do have in common a widespread unwillingness to believe that two and two are four. In 1948, on the basis of crude counts — economic pluses and min-uses, what affected interest groups were saying — a handful of media pundits suggested that their colleagues might be premature in concentrating on Thomas E. Dewey's likely cabinet choices. Similar exercises in arithmetic now suggest that Mr. Reagan is by no means this year's certain, or even probable, winner.

Mr. Reagan won in 1980 by 8.4 million votes in a race that included the independent contender John B. Anderson, who received 5.7 million. With little chance that Mr. Anderson will again figure seriously in the race, does anyone believe that an appreciable number of his moderately liberal supporters will now swing to the president, knowing him to be further to the right than they ever suspected? et even if a quarter of them improbably do so, his Democratic opponent should inherit a substantial readymade base for closing the 1980 gap.

Consider next those Democrats who, unhappy with Jimmy Carter, voted for Ronald Reagan. The question is: What reason have they to stay with him? In 1980, he captured 55 percent of the senior citizens, in spite of some worry about the depth of his commitment to keeping Social Secu-rity undiluted. That edginess can only have deepened with every indication by the president that the way to trim the budget is to start with 'entitlements" rather than even begin with a Defense Department given such larcenous waste as naving $1,075 for a 67-cent bolt and $2,000 for a 13-cent nut to go with it. What with runaway inflation and the national shame of having been bullied by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Mr. Reagan four years ago gathered 48 percent of the blue collar vote to Mr. Carter's 45 percent. Some of this following will stay with the president, but with unemployment still higher than when he took office, sizable labor defections seem likely, especially in light of resent-ment over his failure to deal with government-subsidized foreign competition, especially in cars, steel, textiles and electronics; an approach to schools that has won him the enthusi-astic hostility of teachers: and his firing of 12,000 air controllers in 1981 when he argued that their strike against the Federal Aviation Administration was illegal.

The president seems to have less to lose among black voters because he captured relatively few of them to begin with. What gives the black vote increased significance now is greatly stepped up registration. The new black voters - possibly a million potentially represent a solid gain for Mr. Reagan's opponent.

Four years ago, a higher percentage of women voters favored the president than were against him, but that advantage is believed to have been more than reversed. His antifeminism, the worse for its jocular wrappings, must be added to an expected defection by women caused by a fresh perception of Mr. Reagan as the fastest gun in the West. Gener-ally, that same perception as it relates to the nuclear freeze, the Lebanon fiasco, the quagmire in Central America and the pile-up of armaments may already have gone far to dim "the glory that was Grenada."

But won't the economy more than make up for these losses? Among investors, possibly — unless the mar-ket becomes consistently bearish in-stead of just badly wavering. In more populous segments of the electorate. it is hard to answer the question affirmatively. Inflation is down, but lowand middle-income voters, especially those on fixed incomes, while they pay out 3 to 4 percent more in living costs, spend little time giving thanks that the inflation rate is not, say, 15

Farmers, alarmed by the steady increase in foreclosures, have pointedly warned the president that they cannot live on jelly beans. And, not least, the swollen budget deficit of an administration pledged to government on the cheap can delight some segments of the business community no more than it delights the president's chief economic adviser. Martin S. Feldstein.

Mr. Reagan's greatest source of comfort must be the opinion polls. But these were similarly good reading for the Republicans in 1948, the year when it was observed that the polls went to the dogs instead of the other way around.

Jackson's Message: 'We're Movin' on Up'

By David S. Broder

C HICAGO — The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson has won three buttles in the Democratic presidential race that has changed the shape of U.S. polities. He has won the battle for credibility, he has won the struggle for survival and he has won a position of influence greater than any black poli-

The full consequences of his achievements cannot be defined but they are being felt from here to the White House, where President Reagan's aides are alternately delighted and terrified by what they see Mr. Jackson doing.

"I can see this guy splitting the Democratic coalition with his demands," said one top Republican strategist, "but I can also see him turning out the vote that beats us." Mr. Jackson has established his credibility in two important ways. At the verbal level, he has proved him-self quick in debate and has shown he can translate a variety of issues into his own preferred idiom — a rhetoric of "empowering the poor" that has been absent from U.S. politics for almost 20 years.

At the level of numbers, where politics becomes starkly clear, Mr. Jackson has established his ability to win strong majorities of the black votes in almost every state where he has run, even against the urging of local black elected officials and Dem-ocratic Party leaders backing former Vice President Walter F. Mondale. In the course of the campaign, he has clearly established the base for future black candidacies for Congress and state offices.

Mr. Jackson has won the battle for political survival. He has come back from the low point of his campaign, less than two weeks in the past, when he was threatened with the loss of federal matching funds and mired in the "Hymietown" controversy. His apology for his verbal gaffe and his strong showing in the South brought him home to Illinois as one of the three finalists in the Democratic race.

The symbolic significance of that achievement was dramatized last Saturday when Mr. Jackson returned to the South Side headquarters of his own community-action group, Operation PUSH, no longer a neighborhood organizer but a certified presidential candidate, introduced and supported by the mayor of Chicago.

"We're movin' on up," he told his 2,000 followers, bringing both tears and cheers from the crowd. "At the '72 convention. George McGovern was the nominee ... Reubin Askew the keynoter ... I was just fightin' for a scat in the hall . . . and I beat 'em in New Hampshire. "Movin" on up. Alan Cranston -:

powerful senator from California. and I beat him. Fritz Hollings. When he was governor of South Car-olina, I couldn't use the bathroom in the state capitol. I beat Fritz Hollings. We're movin' on up.
"John Glenn was up there orbiting the Earth when I was scufflin for dimes down here. Now he is gone, and I'm still in the race. We-are-ทุกจะเก่-เกา-แก.

The message, which caused a storm of emotion, has been recorded on the political seismographs of every other politician: Mr. Jackson has leverage "I am at the apex of the triangle," he said at the Sunday night debate with Mr. Mondale and Gary Hart,

"and that is the very opposite of [blacks] being taken for granted by the Democrats or written off by the Republicans."

More time was spent on civil-rights issues in that debate than in any of the forums since the marathon began in 1983 - and that was no accident, By denying Mr. Mondale automatic access to a monolithic black vote, Mr. Jackson has kept the pressure on Mr. Mondale while creating an incentive for Mr. Hart to compete for support in that same community. Given the closeness of the Mondale-Hart contest and the strong civil-rights position of both men. Mr. Jackson really can bargain for specific policy concessions, if he wishes, as the campaign moves through New York, Pennsylvania, Texas, Ohio and California, where the black vote will again be crucial.

There is even a chance now that the least likely scenario at the time Mr. Jackson entered the race last fall could develop. There is a possibility that Mr. Jackson's delegates could hold the balance of power at the San Francisco convention.

One of the senior black officials in the Carter administration and one of the top black elected officials both have suggested in recent days that they can see Mr. Jackson succumbing to the temptation of an independent presidential candidacy - a step that would virtually assure Mr. Reagan's

But the hig black-vote turnouts he has drawn are viewed with apprehension in the Reagan campaign.

Mr. Jackson has gained so much power now that his use of it has become a critical factor in U.S. polities. That could not have been said of any black politician in the past. The Washington Post.

THERE GOES THE

Other Opinion

King Hussein and Self Interest

[King Hussein of Jordan] is right to feel aggrieved about Congressional moves to attach conditions on the sale of Junger a aircraft missiles, and the equipping of the Jordanian mobile force for use in the Gulf, when Israel not only works out its own massive aid program but also has a veto on American sales to Arab states.

Through his criticisms. Hussein is distanc-ing himself from American policy in the Middle East, as well as discouraging new initiatives, and this might be what it is all about. In an election year, self interest, i.e. protecting oneself from the taunts, and worse, of Arab enemies, is not a bad thing for a survivor.

Gemayel Looks Like a Loser

When the Lebanese government of Amin Gemayel canceled the May 17 agreement with Israel it looked as though the biggest loser would be the Jewish state. Subsequent developments have shown that initial surmise to be wrong. The floundering and marked lack of progress at the Syrian-dominated Lausanne reconciliation talks has shown that the biggest loser is likely to be Lebanon itself.

President Gemayel got nothing in return for his agreement to scrap the unratified pact, which had provided for the orderly withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon, security guarantees for Israel and normal relations between the neighboring states. Neither his Moslem opponents nor the Syrian president,

Hafez al-Assad who backs them, made any concessions aimed at guaranteeing the eventual sovereignty of Lebanon. The Israelis will stay put in southern Lebasurrogate forces to control that region. The [Israeli] government has lost its gamble that it would get a peace agreement with a second Arab nation to buttress its shaky accord with Egypt, but it has not lost much else. - The Bangkok Post.

Open Race for the White House

Mr. Reagan's main worry would be if the long [Democratic nominating process] brought something even better out of Mr. Hart. Against the younger man's message of apparent idealism, Mr. Reagan could be vulnerable. The fact that Mr. Hart's message may be specious did not stop it working in the South, and this should give Mr. Reagan partic-ular pause. For the South is not all sold on talk, either of idealism or of the future. It has a good line, too, in ancient senators, old industries and large, traditional military establishments. The even older Northeast is ready to vote Democratic if the Democrats would but give it a decent candidate to vote for. The new West and Southwest, thought of as Reagan country, may, come the fall, find a Coloradan running against him for president with, say, a popular Texan like Mr. Lloyd Bentsen as Mr. Hart's running mate. The least Mr. Hart's lightning jump to prominence has done — so far — is open up this year's race for the White House.

Why Business Should Fear The Space Weapons Race

By William Rosenau

Old West - a vast area untained and full of opportunity. More and more world business is recognizing that billions of dollars can be made in this unregulated environment.

Bul, like the Old West, outer space also is threatened by gunslingers and desperadoes: The United States and the Soviet Union are now initiating an anti-satellite weapons race. Without a treaty banning these systems. space will be like a frontier town without a sheriff —full of danger and inhospitable to investment. During the last decade the world has come to rely on satellite technology for civilian benefit — in telecommunications, weather forecasting and so forth. Now we are beginning to understand the potential for multibillion-dollar manufacturing enterprises in outer space. Recently the National Aeronautics and Space Administration identified 250 customers interested in having that agency launch satellites.

Alluring as this new economic frontier is, it is jeopardized by the growing military use of space. The superpowers have long employed satellites for surveillance, command and control, and for treaty verification. But the stability of space is threatened by an all-out anti-satellite weapons race, and by the probability that the Reagan administration also will try to develop space-based anti-ballistic missile weapons. The simple fact is that the militarization of space could make an already high-

Massachusetts — risk environment even riskier for pri-

Since the early 1960s the U.S. business community has been keenly aware of the commercial possibilities of space. American Telephone & Telegraph, after concluding that a satellite would be cheaper than new trans-Atlantic telephone cables, launched its Early Bird in 1965. Satellite communications have become a multibillion-dollar enterprise. Materials processing in space is another area of extraordinary potential growth. According to Congress' Office of Technology Assessment, silicon crystals for semiconductors, and biological substances such as interferon, can be produced far more efficiently in the low-gravity environment of space than they can on Earth.

The potential for space manufacturing has already resulted in business deals. GTI Corp., McDonnell Douglas and Johnson & Johnson's Ortho Pharmaceuticals have entered into a joint-endeavor agreement with NASA, under which the companies are investing heavily in research on space-based drug production. These companies accept that space is a high-risk, long-term investment environment. What most of them do not mention - at least not publicly - is that an extraterrestrial arms race, in which hundreds of sophisticated weapons might be deployed, could make space inhospitable to commercial enterprise.

The immediate worry is anti-satellite technology. Both the United States and the Soviet Union have had based anti-ballistic missile systems. One such scheme, known as the these interceptors was halted in the early 1970s. Now a new rivalry in the field is under way, one that will be far more menacing than its predecessor.

The most likely threat to business is an indirect one, such as efforts to create interference with communications. Telecommunications companies have said that it is not economically feasible to protect their satellites against anti-satellite weapons, but apparently they would accept the chance of losing one of their orbiters. To companies involved with materials processing, the astronomi-cal cost of building and operating laboratories in space may not be worth the risk in a tense environment populated with such weapons. The dangers are easier to comprehend when one considers space-

"High Frontier," envisages 432 orbiting battle stations, each armed with 40 to 50 non-nuclear warheads. These battle stations, with the aid of infrared sensors, would destroy Soviet missiles soon after launch. Even if feasible - and most scientists are skeptical - such ABMs would be extremely provocative and would violate the cornerstone of arms control.

the 1972 ABM Treaty.
Equally troubling for business — and of more immediate concern — is the economic impact of a military space race. Only a trickle of technology sharing between military space research and the private sector has characterized these two separate efforts in the past.

According to the Office of Technology Assessment, "the sensitive and highly classified nature of military and intelligence space systems has made it difficult to transfer technology from these programs to the civilian sector." Full-throttle military competition in space, with the Department of Defense dominating the space research and development infrastructure, could mean the end of U.S. dominance in commercial space

What are the alternatives to this troubling prospect? Arms control A treaty limiting the testing and deployment of the weapons would help to ensure that space remains a stable environment, both for military satellites used in intelligence and communications and for private enterprise. Even if one sets aside the business reasons, a treaty makes sense militarily: The United States is far more dependent on satellites for national security than is the Soviet Union.

Japan's Military — How Strong Is Strong Enough?

OKYO — It does not make sense for U.S. L officials to keep pressing Japan to increase its defense spending without first resolving the interpretation gap between Tokyo and Washington on how strong a military force Japan needs. Besides, the pressure is resented and could have a negative effect. The Japanese take their "peace constitution seriously, and any suggestion that they are being forced to build up a military capa-bility beyond the constitutionally sanctioned needs of self defense could ignite public protests the government could not ignore.

The basic premise under the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty is that Japanese forces need only be strong enough to hold off an enemy until the Americans come to their aid.

But Washington believes that since Japan is now a major economic power, it can and should do more. As a result, Japan has agreed, for example, to assume responsibility for the defense of its sea lanes up to 1.000 miles (1.600 kilometers) from Japanese shores — a fact to which U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger referred to with satisfaction in a recent report to Congress.

The problem is nobody has defined how many ships and planes Japan would need to protect such a wide expanse of sea. For Japan to develop a significant sea-lane derense within the current decade - the time frame the U.S. hopefully envis-

By Ken Ishii

ages - it would have to double its defense budget. perhaps more, according to military analysts. From the Japanese view this is out of the question. Even now, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is struggling with the consequences of having approved a 6.55 percent increase in the 1984 military budget which, together with increases in personnel breaches the spending barrier of one percent of the gross national product. The ceiling was established by the government in 1976 as a guideline, but Japan's GNP has not grown as rapidly as was then anticipated. Nevertheless, the one-percent figure has in the public mind become a symbol of Japan's determination never again to become a major military power.

Japan could "defend" its sea lanes up to 1,000 miles right now, using bases on Iwo Jima and Okinawa, but it would be a thin defense.

The kind of navy Japan would need would be certain to frighten Japan's Asian neighbors.

Like the one-percent spending level, the 1,000-mile declaration is symbolic. The Defense Agency's 1983 white paper defines the role of the maritime defense force as "primarily" for the protection of Japanese ports, harbors and straits, and the protection of ships in "surrounding waters". Another consideration in asking Japan to spend more is how the money is distributed. With personnel costs accounting for a major share of the military budget, a lopsided percentage goes for the 150,000-man infantry. The structure of Japan's military establishment harks back to World War II when an invasion of the homeland was a major possibility. Though it would be the Japanese and not the Americans who would shoulder the major burden in such circumstances under the joint secu-rity arrangement, the likelihood is virtually nil.

military budget will go to cover salary increases for personnel. The remaining 80 billion ven or so ($350 million) will buy four or five aircraft at most. Defense specialists make another point. They say the Americans — and the Japanese in order to go along with the Americans — tend to measure Japan's military capability too much in terms of ships, planes, tanks and other battle equipment. Pictured this way, the country is sorely unprepared

Half of the 6.55-percent increase in next year's in the area of logistics and support. The gap between how Americans and Japanese interpret Japan's military needs can be narrowed only when the gap is narrowed among Japanese themselves between the belief that they need only enough to defend their homeland, and the perception that Japan's military role should be measured within the framework of Western security in Asia. LETTER

Hart: A Breed Apart Regarding the report "Europe Asks.

'Is Hart Another Carter or Another Kennedy' "(March 16): It is said that coming events cast their shadows before them. Indica-tions show that Ronald Reagan will be in for another term after the pres-dential election. But this also reveals a trend — in future presidential elections after Mr. Rengan - in which

Gary Hart looms large. What separates Mr. Hart from other contestants is his freshness of outlook and a liberalism, which may not be very palpable to conservatives. - 1 Troop Pullout Could End Deadlock Over Namibia

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY - Cuba has said it would withdraw its estimated 25,000 troops from Angola if a series of conditions are met involving South Africa and pro-Western rebels battling Angola's Marxist government.

The withdrawal, if it occurred. could help break a deadlock in negotiations to grant independence to the territory of South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, which lies between Angola and South Africa and is ruled by South Africa. South Africa, backed by the United States, has said repeatedly that the presence of the Cuban soldiers is the only barrier to independence for Namibia

Prensa Latina, Cuba's news neency, said the proposal for the Cuban pullout was outlined in a joint communique issued Monday following talks between presidents Fidel Castro of Cuba and Jose Eduardo dos Santos of Angola, Mr. dos Santos arrived in Havana late last week for talks with Mr. Castro.

The Prensa Latina dispatch from Havana, received in Mexico City, said the communique listed these conditions for Cuba to remove its

"The unilateral withdrawal of the racist troops of South Africa from Augolan territory; the strict application of resolution 435-78 of the UN Security Council, with ac-cess for Namibia to its true independence and the withdrawal of South African troops that are illegally occupying that country, and the cessation of all types of direct aggression or threat of aggression against the RPA [People's Repubhe of Angola) on the part of South Africa, the United States and its

· "Added to these three requirements also is the indispensable condition ... that all aid to the comterrevolutionary organization UNITA and any other puppet group cease on the part of South

UNITA — the National Union for the Total Independence of Anpower struggle in Angola after the Portugal in 1975. Cuba sent troops to Angola to help the government battle the pro-Western UNITA guerrillas and other anti-Marxist rebels who are widely believed to be aided by South Africa.

In the communiqué, Mr. Castro noted "the beroism of the Angolan people" and Mr. dos Santos exssed "the infinite gratitude of the Angelan people for the internanonalist aid of the Cuban people."

However, the conditions for Cuban withdrawal outlined in the communique are close to positions South Africa has taken recently. South Africa already has agreed to withdraw its troops from Angola, and a promise to halt support for anti-Marxist guerrillas battling Mr. dos Santos' government would be in line with a comparable pact signed Friday between South Africa and Mozambique.

Poles' Habit of Getting Local News From Foreign Radios Vexes Warsaw

New York Times Service WARSAW - There seem to be two kinds of news in Poland what the newspapers print and what the people want to know.

Monday morning, for example, vspapers were filled with the news of the conclusion over the weekend of the big Communist Party delegate conference here.

But what most Poles wanted to know about was the latest development in the controversy over the government's removal of crucifixes from public schools. New Impasse Foreseen in Iraq-Iran War

By Drew Middleton New York Times Service

NEW YORK - The war between Iran and Iraq appears to U.S. and other Western intelligence sources to be near another impasse, with the Iranians unable to rupture the long Iraqi frontier and the Iraqis unable to exploit their defensive

It is possible, these sources said, that the Iranians, by combining their remaining regular forces and tens of thousands of raw but eager teen-age volunteers, will be able to pierce Iraqi defenses at some point

But reports from representatives of NATO countries with embassies in Tehran say the offensives appear to strain Iran's limited logistical resources.

Two weeks ago, intelligence sources from these countries said, they expected an Iranian attack involving 250,000 men to be made from the hills facing Iraq's Missan province on the central front But no such offensive developed, the sources said, largely because the assembly of such a large force and the needed supplies were beyond the capacity of the Iranian Army.

Most military analysts still expect an offensive but think the Iragis know where it will begin and have moved reinforcements to the Western intelligence sources said Iran's apparent inability to mount a decisive offensive was only one reason the deadlock was likely to continue. A second, they said, is the continuing failure of the Iraqi Army to exploit success in defense and of the Iraqi Air Force to use its quantitative and qualitative superiority against important targets on the front and in the rear areas.

The informants said one reason why the Iraqi Army tended not to tions was that its battalion and regimental commanders refused to make decisions in a developing battlefield situation.

Many decisions are handed to division or corps headquarters, then to the higher command in Baghdad, resulting in a loss of time and opportunities.

There are indications, however, that the Baghdad command is increasingly aware of this problem. President Saddam Hussein in recent speeches has stressed the importance of independent thinking by commanders in the field.

The air force has done little better. Although Iran has few fighters and they are poorly maintained, the Iraqis, military analysts say, have done little to use their superi-

New Testimony by Guard Contradicts Manila's Version of Aquino Shooting

Washington Post Service MANILA - A private security guard testified Tuesday that he saw blood on the back of Benigno S. Aquino Jr. as the Philippine oppo-sition leader fell from plane steps on the day of his death last August. The testimony was the strongest contradiction so far of the govern-

He had testified on March 8 and told a fact-finding board that, after he heard the first shot, Mr. Aquino was still on the plane steps and he had his head tilted to the left, while two military escorts held him on both sides. He made no mention then of seeing blood on Mr.

His testimony was corroborated by his two colleagues who said Mr. Aquino was still on the steps after they heard the first shot.

Mr. Ranas's testimony countered the government's version that Mr. Aquino was shot after he had descended the stairs and reach the tarmac. The government claims that a lone gunman, Rolando Galman, shot Mr. Aquino in the back at the behest of Communists, Mr.

Earlier an American journalist, Sandra Burton, Time Magazine's bureau chief in Hong Kong, testified that security guards prevented journalists in the plane from accompanying Mr. Aquino out. WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, which insisted that El Salvador conduct a presidential election this year, is worried that the vote Sunday could turn into a setback for its attempts to win more military aid from Congress.

No matter which of the two leading candidates wins - José Napoleón Duarte, a Social Democrat, or Roberto d'Aubuisson, a far-rightist - State Department officials say the aftermath is likely to produce political difficulties in Republicans and Democrats in the Senate and House have warned that they may oppose despite his alleged links to the death squads and further aid increases if Mr. d'Aubuisson wins. He has been accused of ordering assassinations try. by rightist death squads.

"I think it is of some consequence," Mr. Inouye said. "It's important to me."

Senator Warren B. Rudman, Republican of New Hampshire, said: "D'Aubuisson is not among the favorites in this institution."

Mr. Inouye has announced that he will ask the Senate to shelve almost half of the Reagan administration's request for $93 million in immediate military aid until after the election. State Department officials, while remaining officially neutral, have made it no secret that they would prefer almost anyone to Mr. d'Aubuisson, candidate of the far-right Republican National Alliance. But even a victory by Mr. Duarte could present the United States with another problem.

"If Mr. Duarte wins," said a U.S. diplomat monitoring the campaign, "we'll probably see a backlash from the right and an upsurge in death squad activity." and that, in turn, could hamper administration requests for more aid in Con-It is ironic, "almost poignant," an official said, that the elections, which were intended to lend some stability and legitimacy to El Salvador's government, have become a point of contention in the debate in the U.S. Congress over the aid that maintains that regime.

Mr. Duarte spent almost a week in Washington promoting his Christian Democratic Party to U.S. congressmen and reporters.

Mr. d'Aubuisson wanted to visit, too, but the State Department turned him down, so he made do with a delegation of lobbyists working out of the office of Senator Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina.

Even the Salvadoran guerrillas, some of whom have promised a campaign to distupt the elections, tried to sway the Washington press corps with a slickly produced information packet describing themselves as "a truly pluralist

The State Department was caught up in the campaign when Mr. d'Aubuisson pressed his application for a visa. Officials had hoped to duck the issue to avoid signaling their distaste so clearly; Mr. d'Aubuisson denounced them on the stump as "the real death squads."

Members of Congress worned aloud about the possible effect of approving or not approving new military aid while the campaign was

U.S. officials say this issue was debated within the administration several months ago after officers of the Central Intelligence Agency suggested that they could influence the results. An aide to a key Republican senator said he foresaw long-term problems.

"If d'Aubuisson wins, you could see a fullscale split in the Salvadoran Army" between rightist and centrist officers, he said. "That would leave such a vacuum that the guerrillas could occupy half of the major cities.'

Long before the elections were scheduled, those arguments were echoed within the administration. Officials such as Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the chief U.S. representative at the United Nations, worried that the turmoil of an electoral campaign might divert the army's attention from the guerrilla war. They suggested that an election was needed less in San Salvador than in the perceptions of Washington.

But Mr. Shultz argued then that the trappings of democracy would strengthen the Salvadoran regime both at home and in Congress, and he makes the same case today.

D'Aubuisson: Advocate Of a Military Escalation

New York Tunes Service

SAN SALVADOR — Asking "Who is Roberto d'Aubuisson and what will he do next?" is a popular game in El Salvador's capiwas an army colonel until he was cashiered by a tal. The answers do not come easily.

Associates say Mr. d'Aubuisson, 40, whose handsome, regular features appear so tense that one observer described him as "having clenched hair," prefers one-to-one dealing to committeestyle decision-making.
"He will sit around a big table listening and then call someone over to the side to meet with him later," an observer said. "Then he really talks. He has the uncanny ability to manipulate other people, or to make you uneasy while you are asking questions."

While no one in El Salvador has been able to figure out how to win a military victory, or how to win support for reconciliation with the left, Mr. d'Aubuisson, the presidential candidate of the Republican National Alliance, has almost singlehandedly made mere talk of dialogue a ground for suspicion of being a Communist.

In his campaign for the presidency, he characterizes the Christian Democratic Party and its candidate, José Napoleón Duarte, as Commuquently refers to as "the crazy man," is allied with the leftist guerrillas.

Mr. d'Aubuisson has said there should be no negotiation with the guerrillas and promised the rigor of the law for those who act against the sacred interests of the people." As president of the country's Constituent

Assembly until he resigned the post late last year, Mr. d'Aubuisson managed to quash talk of dialogue with the left and is a leading advocate a push for military victory in the four-year civil reformist junta that took power in October Earlier this month, a former Salvadoran military official gave members of the U.S. Congress information implicating Mr. d'Aubuisson, among others, in the organization and direction of rightist death squads that remain active in El Salvador and are believed to include members of the armed forces. Robert E. White, the Carter administration's ambassador to El Salvador, said last month, as he has often, that Mr. d'Aubuisson was involved in the operation of the squads and that he had "planned and ordered" the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero in 1980. Mr. d'Aubuisson has denied the allegations.

Mr. d'Aubuisson favors undoing many of the economic reforms imposed by Mr. Duarte's U.S.-backed provisional government in 1980-82, especially the nationalization of important exports such as coffee.

Mr. d'Aubuisson also has said that he would nists. He alleges that Mr. Duarte, who he fre- put leading figures of the country's private sector in charge of government ministries and agencies in charge of the economy. Major busissmen and landowners are thought to be key financial supporters of his campaign.

Mr. d'Aubuisson, a member of a well-known but by no means wealthy family, was sent to military school when he was 15 years old. Later, his mentor was José Alberto Medrano, a hardline anti-Communist.

Political experts say that as an intelligence officer for General Medrano, he copied the files of other Salvadoran officials and used the information to inspire respect when he made his four years of civil war, political sources said. Although he presents himself as the most open to dialogue with the rebels, Mr. Duarte rules out negotiations over power-sharing, as sought by the guerrillas. As a result, the Christian Democrats most likely would continue to press the war effort while trying to eradicate rightist violence. This could make it possible for the rebels to participate in legislative elections a year from now. The guerrillas have not forgiven Mr. Duarte, however, for making the deal with the army that brought him to power as head of the junta in 1980, and rebel propaganda is as critical of him as of Mr. d'Aubuisson Regarding the other main problem afflicting the nation, the economy, Mr. Duarte would face difficulty because of the hostility of the private sector, Salvadoran politicians and businessmen said. The landowning and business community resent the Christian Democrats for overseeing the U.S.-supported 1980 land and banking reforms, which were designed to draw popular support away from the guerrillas. Cut off from campaign funds from the private sector, the Christian Democrats have borrowed money and obtained it from sympathizers abroad. Mr. Rey Prendes said foreign contributions totaled about $200,000, most of it from West Germany, while the party borrowed about $500,000 for the campaign.

The party also has a significant source of support in the 500,000-member Popular Democratic Union, the nation's largest alliance of peasant and urban labor unions.

Mr. Rey Prendes said that a nationwide poll commissioned by the party and carried out about two weeks ago showed Mr. Duarte with 48 percent. Mr. d'Aubuisson with 31 percent and the National Conciliation Party candidate. Francisco Guerrero, with 15 percent.

While that is not enough for Mr. Duarte to avoid a runoff after the March 25 election, in which more than 50 percent is necessary for a first-round victory in a field of eight candidates, it would put him in a strong position for a second round, expected to held April 22.

Small Firms Find a Niche In EC's Esprit Program

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

nternational Herald Tribun RUSSELS - When two young Belgian entrepreneurs decided to apply for research and development funds from Esprit, the EC's program to encourage high-technology industries, they knew they would be competing with the big established companies in Europe who were behind the idea of the project from the start.

But, confident of their research project in computer software, the Belgian Institute of Management (BIM), presented its proposal. The company, which includes 16 engineers and one resident cook tucked away in the Belgian countryside between a turkey farm and an endive grower, was awarded a con-tract last fall by Esprit to fi-nance the standard 50 percent of the project's total cost. Thus, BIM became one of four small companies to get a primary contract out of 38 awarded during Esprit's trial run period, though many small companies were among the subcontractors on other projects. Esprit projects have an average of three to four partners, with at least two industrial partners from different member states.

Europe's 'Big 12' technology groups will take the lion's share of funds.

Last month, European governments agreed to spend 1.5 billion European Currency Units ($1.24 billion) to expand the modest trial project begun in 1983 into a full-blown program. During Esprit's trial period, 70 percent of the contracts were awarded to Europe's 12 leading high-technology groups, such as Siemens of West Germany, Thomson of France and ICL of Britain. As Esprit gears up for its expanded program, its staff expects the mix of projects suggested to his and small companies. expects the mix of projects awarded to big and small companies to be about the same as during the trial period, with the lion's share still going to the Big 12.

"The Big 12, after all, do represent 80 percent of R&D in Europe," says a spokesman for the Esprit task force. The EC and its member governments also believe that big is beautiful. "A lot of them still don't understand that in some high-tech fields, you only need one Quincy Jones to produce a Michael Jackson," says a Belgian physicist. The big companies weren't keen from the start to let smaller companies in on their know-how. Esprit's goal is to create a commmon pool of technological expertise. Participants licensing Esprit program are required to grant non-exclusive licensing rights at "reasonable terms" to other companies in the program. Those working on the same project are required to share the know-how developed during the Esprit contract with each other

As a result of the reticence among some of the big companies and their governments to let smaller companies in, Esprit has been criticized, mainly by proponents of a European technological development model à la Silicon Valley, as just another bureaucratic endeavor giving hand-outs to the big companies and squashing innovation at the entrepreneurial level. But BIM's story and that of other smaller participants suggest that Esprit and the Big 12 have not completely shut out the smaller companies. The door appears at least partly open.

In spite of opposition from certain member governments and their industries. Esprit has made sure there would be some resources available in its expanded program for smaller companies with projects "that require a flexible infrastructure and individual thinking rather than a system approach." Whereas in one category of projects the company has to put up at least $10 million over 5 years as its contribution to the project cost, for the smaller projects there is no minimum amount required.

Esprit is also ready to finance more than the standard 50percent of the total cost of the project in some cases. "It is just possible that some projects will get more than 50 percent in the man. In the pilot phase, most of the smaller companies got the additional financing from their national government. Barring that option, however, smaller companies have much greater difficulty generating internal funds for research and development or getting it from the banks than larger companies do.

The small companies being funded by Esprit will not get the additional money they need from the banks because there are no immediate results to show," says Mr. Paul Schoenmackers, one of

U.S. Court Restricts Trust Suits

Burden of Proof Put on Distributor

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Supreme Court made it more diffi-cult Tuesday for independent dis-tributors to win antitrust suits, ruling that they must prove that suppliers and other distributors acted together to fix prices.

But the court, led by Justice Lewis F. Powell, said that standard had been met in a case brought by an independent distributor in Iowa and upheld a $10.5-million award against Monsanto Co.

In a unanimous ruling, the court said the jury properly found that Monsanto and most of its distributors had conspired to fix the retail price of herbicides and had forced an independent discount distributor out of the market.

While the court allowed the jury verdict to stand, it rejected an argument accepted by lower courts that a distributor, to win an antitrust case, must only prove it was dropped by a manufacturer because of other distributor com-

The case began in Iowa, when Spray-Rite Service Corp. brought suit against Monsanto Co., alleging that the St. Louis chemical company had conspired with its distributors to fix resale prices on its herbi-

In 1980, Spray-Rite won its case in federal court and was awarded $10.5 million in damages.

Spray-Rite sold agricultural chemical products, including those of Monsanto, to dealers and farmers in northern Illinois.

Although Spray-Rite was the 10th largest distributor of a Monsanto herbicide, Monsanto ended its distributorship in 1968. Unable to obtain Monsanto products from other companies, Spray-Rite went out of business in 1972.

Donald Yapp, Spray-Rite's owner and sole salesman, filed suit against Monsanto contending that the company conspired to tix the resale prices of its herbicides in response to complaints that some distributors' prices were too low.

Mr. Yapp said Monsanto furthered the conspiracy by ending his distributorship and encouraging other distributors to boycott Spray-

The trial court agreed with Mr. dict on the ground that Monsanto ended the distributorship after receiving numerous complaints

Monsanto appealed to the Sudistributorships. It said Mr. Yapp should also be required to prove that it had joined with distributors in the kind of "concerted action" that triggers the Sherman Antitrust

The court agreed with Monsanto's on the requirement of the law. But the justices also said the evidence sufficiently proved concerted action against Spray-Rite.

Biotechnology Firms Brace for War

Patent Struggles Seen Becoming Fiercer, Costlier

By David E. Sanger New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Commercial success of the biotechnology in-dustry may no longer hinge on the next scientific breakthrough or the clinical testing of drugs created through gene-splicing techniques.
Instead, the fortunes of the leading biotechnology compa-nies will probably be determined in courtrooms and in the hearing rooms of the United States and in European patent offices.

In fact, the biggest players in the field — hoping to market their first significant medical products by year-end — are already poised for a patent war. The winners will hold exclusive in the United States and rights in the United States and Europe to medical products that many expect will generate hundreds of millions of dollars in

The first of those disputes, already under way, are particularly contentious because they involve some of the broadest and potentially most lucrative patents. But they also raise some of the most sticky legal questions. Chief among them is: At what point does one "life form" becomes distinct from another? Can a company, for example, claim a separate patent on a genetic in-vention that differs from a competitor's only in the composition of a string of two dozen or so amino acids, out of hundreds?

Many expect the answers to those questions will take years to resolve, at a cost of millions in legal fees. "If I had a child headed into a career now," Orrie M. Friedman, the chairman of Col-laborative Research Inc., a Lexington, Massachusetts, biotechnology concern, mused recently, "I'd want him to be a patent lawyer - preferably a biotechnology-patent lawyer.

The courts' first shot at those issues may come in a dispute that took shape just three weeks ago between two of the industry's fiercest competitors. The European Patent Office, which han-Western Europe, gave a preliminary indication that it would grant a patent to Biogen Inc., a Geneva-based biotechnology company, giving it exclusive rights in Europe to market alpha interferon, an antiviral agent be-tion to make interferon.

forms of cancer. The decision was immediately challenged by Genentech Inc., a South San Francisco company that asserts that it, not Biogen, invented the "mature" form of alpha interferon now being used in clinical tests.

lieved effective against some

The outcome will probably determine which company will be able to say that it was the first to market interferon, a naturally produced protein that can only be produced in usable quantities through gene-splicing, also known as recombinant DNA techniques. It will sharply affect the fortunes of two major phar-maceutical companies, Schering-Plough and Hoffmann-La Roche, which are acting as the marketing partners for Biogen and Genentech, respectively, and who have sunk tens of millions of dollars into development of the products.

But even as it is being re-solved, other biotechnology companies are rushing to stake patent claims, fearing that by the time the legal questions are answered, most of the most lucra-tive inventions will be spoken for. While the U.S. Patent Office reported last week that it has issued only about 100 biotechnology patents so far, it is considering more than 1,000 appli-

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy is not "overheating."

Many forecasters have been predicting that the gross national product, adjusted for inflation. would rise at a rate of 6 percent or less this quarter rather than the 7.2 percent indicated in the Commerce Department's "flash" estimate for the first quarter. These flash estimates are issued before a quarter is

As it was, the Commerce Department report estimated inflation at a 4.4-percent annual rate this quarter, up from a revised 3.9 percent in the fourth quarter and 3.6 percent in the third quarter of 1983. the President's Council of Economic Advisers, offerred a similar as-sessment. "I'm not worried about overheating at this time," he said. "A large part of the increased output is going into inventory accumu-lation, and price pressures remain under control."

Tuesday's report, which is based on incomplete data and subject to later revision, said both final sales and business-inventory investment is increasing substantially this

Some analysts, however, ques-tioned Mr. Feldstein's statement because the Commerce Depart-ment said "much" of the rise in business inventories was a one-time event related to a payment-in-kind program under which the federal goverment gives farmers grain and other crops to help support farm

Roger Brinner, an economist at Data Resources Inc., an economicforecasting firm, said the "midwin-ter boom" will increase GNP growth this year to about 5.7 per-cent rather than the 4.5 percent predicted by the Reagan adminis-

Mr. Baldrige, on the other hand, said part of this quarter's growth is the result of consumers' making some purchases that they post-poned in December because of bad weather and the byproduct of a bunching of auto production, which is slated to decline this spring.

"We see no reason to change the administration's 4.5-percent growth estimate for the year," he declared.

Mr. Brinner agreed with the administration's assessments of infla-tion prospects. "It's a strong quarter but one in which inflation hasn't shown up as the problem," the economist said. The unexpected surge in housing starts at the beginning of the year will spread some of the extra strength into the second quarter, he added.

Malaysia to Investigate Commodities Charges

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysia protecting the interests of people trading in commodity futures has set up a tribunal to investigate allegations against the Kuala Lumpur Commodity Exchange, its management board and the Kuala Lumpur Commodities Clearing House, the primary industries minister. Paul Leong, said Tuesday.

This is the first time that a threemember tribunal, provided for un-der Malaysia's commodity trading act of 1980, has been activated since the exchange and clearing March 20 house were set up three and one half years ago, he said.

> by a businessman, C.G. Loo, who said he had been an active seller on the local pain-oil-futures market. Mr. Leong said that the commissioner of commodities trading would lead an investigation into five commodity trading firms for defaulting on contracts traded. Without naming them, he said they had defaulted by not coming up with additional margins for the

Trading in the exchange was sus-pended Thursday after six compa-nies had defaulted on some 5,600 contracts representing about 140,000 metric tons of palm oil. . Mr. Leong said the Commodities Trading Council also froze the accounts of all defaulting companies, which contain millions of dollars, pending an investigation into their activities.

The investigation is aimed at determining whether there was any CHICAGO - International Harvester Co. said Tuesday in a stock-sale prospectus that its French subsidiary, IH France, will run out of cash by July 31 if current conditions continue. It said the unit might be plunged into receivership if it fails to obtain a debt restructuring.

If the subsidiary goes into receivership, Harvester said the parent company would be obligated to pay about $22 million under certain guarantees... The trustee under receivership might also seek to assert a variety of claims against the parent company under French law," Harvester added.

"Subsequent failure of its other European subsidiaries could cause [Harvester] to write off the net book value of all of its European subsidiaries which, including IH France, to-taled $64 million as of Jan 31, 1984," Harvester said.

New York Times Service thus reducing NEW YORK - Reliance Insur-current level. ance Co., which is controlled by Saul P. Steinberg, disclosed Tuesday that it was considering whether to seek control of Quaker State Oil Relining Corp.

Reliance said it already holds

1,962,000 shares, or 8.9 percent, of the Pennsylvania company and may seek enough additional stock to give it 20 percent. The announcement was made after the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Quaker State's stock closed Tuesday at $19.375, up $3.50.

Based on Quaker State's 22 million shares outstanding the com-pany is worth nearly $350 million. Quaker State is a major producer of lubricants, fuels and waxes.

Reliance first reported its stock position in Quaker State last July. At the time, Reliance said it owned 1,986,195 shares, including 24,095 shares if it converted certain Quaker State debentures that it held. Reliance said Tuesday that it

Cyprus Corp. sold the debentures last month, thus reducing its investment to the current level. Buy Shuttle

By Ralph Vartabedian Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES - In what mark the beginning of an unprecedented move to commercialize space travel, Willard F. Rockwell Jr., the U.S. industrialist, has announced that his Cyprus Corp. will open talks with the U.S. space agency about buying a space shut-

State by buying stock in the com-pany or by making a public tender offer for stock. It said it might also So far, no private corporation has successfully owned and operated a manned space system, although several commercial efforts are under way to develop less-complex unmanned launch systems.

Mr. Rockwell disclosed the plans Monday for the talks with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He said Cyprus would use the shuttle for a private launch service for communications Whether Mr. Rockwell's company succeeds is likely to depend in large part on whether he can arrange financing for the purchase. At a cost of "about $2 billion," the purchase of a space-shuttle orbiter would require the resources of several of Wall Street's largest investment banking firms, Mr. Rockwell

Panel Supports Changes at Fed

(Continued from Page 9) Another would require the Fed to keep detailed minutes of Federal Open Market Committee sessions and release them every four years. The committee is the policy-making body of the Fed.

Currently, the Fed issues a summary of com-mittee proceedings six weeks after a meeting, and this practice would continue, congressmen

Other parts of the legislation would lift the current $140-million ceiling on expenditures for construction at Federal Reserve branch banks.

London Stock Exchange Seen Relaxing Rule on Nonmember Holdings

LONDON — The London Stock Exchange is likely to allow nonmembers later this year to hold a higher percentage of member companies than the present 29.9 percent. John Padovan, chairman of County Bank Ltd., said Tuesday, Responding to questions at a press confer-ence called for the announcement of result of the subsidiary of National Westminister Bank PLC, Mr. Padovan said he was very pleased with National Westminister Group's first steps in relation to market maker Bisgood, Bishop & Co. but would not say whether the group is looking for a tieup in the near future.

Last month National Westminister announced it was holding talks with Bismood with

The Bankers Trust philosophy at work, for Procter and Gamble de Mexico.

Close teamwork among professionals at Bankers Trust made possible one of the year's most remarkable transactions.

Our client was Procter and Camble de Mexico, a stand-alone subsidiary of the U.S. parent company. Our challenge: a multi-million dollar refinancing—at the height of Mexico's financial crisis.

With the strong support of the Mexican government, we matched the company's need with Mexico's need to save foreign exchange. We helped them replace costly loans from other banks with a Bankers Trust specialty, commercial paper. (Bankers Trust was the first money center bank to act as agent for issuers of commercial paper. Bankers Trust customers currently have some two billion dollars worth outstanding for which we are sales agent)

The result an innovative $44 million issue of commercial paper, brought to market in the U.S. by Bankers Trust.

The company will save millions in interest costs. Mexico will save large amounts of foreign exchange. And its government has had the satisfacobligations successfully placed in the U.S. capital market. How was Bankers Trust able to coordinate

THE PLACE OF DEAD ROADS

By William Burroughs, 300 pp. $15.95. Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 521 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10175.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard N 1983, William Burroughs was named a I member of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. After finishing his new novel, I thought about that election and it inspired a fantasy. I pictured Burroughs getting up in an auditorium and reading "The Place of Dead Roads" to that august body. What would they do, I wondered, while he detailed the book's accounts of casual and indistinguishable acts of sodomy, its gloating over sadistic killings, its repeated evocations of putrescence and excrement? Would they ap-plaud? Burst into tears? Or just sit there and

One of the things that makes it difficult to judge Burroughs's novels is the fact that you can't tell what they're about. As far as I can discover, "The Place of Dead Roads" is a sadomasochistic allegory of the American West in the form of a series of sexual or homocidal encounters seen against a background of drugs, conspiracy theories of history and science fiction. The protagonist of the book there are no characters in it — is one Kim Carsons, a 19th-century writer of Western stories. He is also a celebrated "shootist," or gunfighter, and the book is padded out with more gun lore than Hemingway's collected works. Since death is never very far from sex in Burroughs's books, Carsons divides his time equally between them. There are so many nearly identical couplings and killings that more than once I thought I had lost my page and read the same passage over again.

Like "Naked Lunch," which made Burroughs a celebrity in 1959, the new novel has a shuttling or stuttering structure, something like the strobe lights in a discotheque. But while "Naked Lunch" had flashes of humor, the only joke in "The Place of Dead Roads" is on us. You might say that the comedy lies in people taking Burroughs seriously as a writer.

For 25 years, he has been called "irreverent" as a term of high praise, and I wonder what this overused word means. Who are all these reverent people ostensibly being mocked here, and what is it that they are alleged to revere, as opposed to Burroughs? Is it heterosexuality? Staying alive? Pleasant odors? It seems to me that the man in the street has a more sophisticated - or irreverent - sense of humor than this Peck's Bad Boy of literature.
"The Place of Dead Roads" is an anthology of contemporary literary affectations. Burroughs dispenses with plot toys with time and space, fiddles with the idea of film techniques and introduces homemade poems into his narrative frame.

For a celebrated author to publish a novel as poor as "The Place of Dead Roads" requires a degree of collusion or encouragement on our part. He must have a certain confidence in our credulity, must assume that bad taste is a good bet, that age cannot wither, nor customs stale the appeal of an established reputation.

It's a common assumption that literary status hangs by a thread, that an author risks everything with each new book, but nothing could be further from the truth. He has inertia.

the most popular form of literary criticism of his side. Once established, his reputation is hard to lose as a bad habit. Some readers, and properties the will man themselves and reviewers too, will turn themselves and their society inside out to rationalize an interbook by a culture here. Nothing in American art is so mysterious as our loyalty to our mistakes. mistakes.

There's a French proverb to the effect that we deserve what we inspire. What we cught be ask ourselves is whether we want to go on inspiring books like "The Place of Dead

Sale of Broncos Is Studied; $70-Million Tag Said Highest for NFL Team

HONOLULU - The sale of the Dallas Cowboys for a reported total of $80 million to a group headed by Texas oilman H.R. (Bum) Bright won quick and unanimous approval of the National Football League's club owners Monday. Meanwhile, the NFL is also studying the impending sale of the Denver Broncos. The team's owner, Edgar F. Kaiser Jr., said Monday that he has sold a majority interest in the team to Canadian businessman Patrick Bowlen, with Denver industrialist John Adams assuming a minority interest.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed. But, according to the Rocky Mountain News, the selling price for the team was $70 million. making the Broncos the highest-

I was not in the stadium and cannot comment of Sara's complaint except to say that Roberts is a noted "competitor" (soccer euphemism for hard man). It may shock sports lovers to learn that not all British competitors are graced with the Torvill and Dean image, but there it is: Roberts personifies the other variety.

Even so he is an innocent compared to the defenders of Barcelona, who will try to stamp out Manchester United's frantic attempts to retrieve a 2-0 deficit from their first leg Cup Winners' Cup encounter, Even with Diego Maradonna and Bernd Schuster willing to turn out less than fully fit, Barcelona is in wretchedly barren form in the Spanish league, leaving their hunger to win at all costs in Europe even more extreme.

The game in Manchester can be won by Barcelona either way: by skill or by thuggery. We can offer the same prayer as the Spurs officials for that one.

But all afficionadoes know that a wounded Liverpool girds its loins for the right kind of revenge: not always flowing but usually purposeful and effective.

If fair play and flair play interest you, A.S. Roma might be ultimate horse to back in the Champions Cup. The Brazilians Roberto Faicao and Toninho Cerezo have got Roma flowing at last, feeding the goalscorers Roberto Pruzzo, Francisco Graziani and Bruno Conti; their Swedish coach Nils Liedholm quietly, effetively goes against the Italian defensive grain; and a 3-0 lead to take behind the Berlin Wall to Dynamo Berlin is surely suffi-

OBSERVER

The High Cost of Serving

NEW YORK — After Ed Meese came to Washington to sit at the right hand of the president, he fell on hard times. I'd warned him it would happen.

"Ed," I told him, "you know those outrageous government salaries everybody complains about — $50,000, $60,000-a-year? With the cost of living in Washington, you're going to be hard pressed for money. What have you been earning in private life?

He changed the subject. Obviously, life had been pretty good to him in California. I'd seen a lot of others like him, a lot of others. In a city where the cost of living has made the dollar grow wings. those outrageous government salaries impoverish them all in the end. That's why it was no surprise to answer the bell one midnight and find Ed on the doorstep. Couldn't sell his house in California, he said. It had been on the market, it seemed like, forever. For the past 15 months he hadn't even been able to make his mortgage payments.

"You want five bucks so you can get a hamburger?" I asked.
That wouldn't solve his financial problem, he said. He wanted me to buy his house.

Talk about being irked. Here was Ed, who wouldn't even wake up the president to tell him about the U.S. Navy shooting down airplanes in the Mediterranean, yet he'd waked me up 10 reject a hamburger.

It made me so angry that I'm afraid I velled. "I'm withdrawing the hamburger offer." I shouted. You guys got it only half right when you went around the country saving. There's no free lunch. There's no free midnight snack either." And slammed the door on

I felt bad about that, especially after hearing that a bank later decided to carry him on the cuff while another fellow bought Ed's house and took a $70,000 loss on it. after which one of the bank people became chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and another got a job at the UN, while the buyer became deputy undersecretary of the interior.

If I'd been quicker to oblige, I might have got the appointment as ambassador to the Vatican, a job where I could muscle the pope into getting on the bandwagon like the rest of Western Europe by install-ing some intermediate-range ballistic missiles in St. Peter's Square.

Naturally, then, I was more gracious the next midnight that Ed turned up. He and his White House buddies by then had experienced the cruelty of the high cost of living and acknowledged it might even be they were handing out free Ameri-

"Ed." I said. "I'm delighted to see you. Wait right here." And I ran to the pantry and brought him back a pound of imported cheese. Having access to the American cheese himself. I figured, he would need something a little more upscale.

Did this signify, he asked, that I could assemble the $60,000 in personal loans he needed to make ends The crassness of this inquiry angered me so that I snatched back the cheese, slammed the door and threw up the window to shout as he departed. "There's no free midnight cheese, either, Ed?"

Well, you know the story — how tax accountant arranged the $60,000 lean package and wound up on the U.S. Postal Service's board of governors.

I hated myself. If I'd behaved like a gentleman. I might have been powerful enough to get my mail delivered on time.

After that I kept my ear to the ground. The ground finally spoke: Ed wanted to borrow $15,000 so Mrs. Meese could buy some stock. When the doorbell rang at midnight. I was prepared, having emptied my bank account that day.

"Ed," I cried, "I know you need a little loan, and I've got 50 bucks for you right here, and do you think it's too late to dump George Bush and slip me into the Number Two place on the ticket?"

Ed slammed the door and left angrily. I was puzzled at the time. but everything came clear later when President Reagan nominated him for attorney general. He couldn't afford to make an enemy of Vice President Bush, who would hold the deciding vote in the Senate if the Senators split 50-50 for and against giving him the job. Which is possible, the way things are going.

Hal Roach: The Prince Of Silent Comedy at 92

By Aljean Harmetz New York Times Service

OS ANGELES - In 1912, the L Titunic sank, vitamin A was discovered and Hal Roach got his first job in the movies - for a dollar a day, carfare, two sandwiches and a banana. Hal Roach never managed to make the Titanic into a one-reel comedy gag, but he certainly found good use for the banana. "We must have had somebody slip on a banana peel 50 different he says, a round-faced Irishman wheeling around cork-screw curves in his Buick Skylark. You always tried to make somebody a nice guy and somebody a bad guy. The nice guy — Harold Lloyd — never slipped, even if the bad guy arranged the banana peel for him. Oliver Hardy - who played the heavy before I put him together with Stan Laurel - must have slipped a dozen times." If Mack Sennett was the king of silent comedy. Hal Roach, who will be given an honorary Academy Award on April 9, was its prince. Mack Sennett's stable included the Keystone Kops. Mabel Normand, Fatty Arbuckle, and very briefly. Charlie Chaplin. Hal Roach had Harold Lloyd, Will Rogers, Laurel and Hardy, and

At 92, he is healthy, hearty and rich enough to live "above the smog." In his prime, he owned a boat, six airplanes and 19 polo ponies and his polo team won the U.S. Western championship four times. He no longer plays polo or even golf, but, in warm weather. he manages a few laps in his pool every day. It is his only concession to good habits.

"I drink. I smoke," he says. He lights a brown cigarillo. I eat everything I want. My brain's still active. I'll get up in the middle of the night to do figures. My mother took care of her own finances until she was 95. Most of the money I have to live on now is money I gave her and she turned into good investments.

narrow mountain road that leads to the top of Bel-Air. Eighteen years ago he gave up his big house and the seven servants necessary to maintain it. Since then, he has lived in a cozy home on a flat spot near the top of the mountain Starting from there always adds spice to the trip down. "I go all the way downhill in low gear, so I never have to touch the brake," he says jovially. The Academy of Motion Pic-ture Arts and Sciences will give Roach his honorary Academy Award "in recognition of his unparalleled record of distinguished contributions to the motion picture art form." His other two Oscars are less pompous. He won in 1931-32 for "The Music Box," a short exercise by Laurel and Hardy on the futility of trying to carry a piano up a flight of stairs. He won again in 1936 for "Bored of Education," 5 minutes of the bedlam the Our Gang kids could create out of anything.

Roach created Our Gang in 1922 after staring idly out his of-fice window at a group of children playing in a lumberyard. He saw them as an antidote to the rouged mini-adults dragged into his office by stage mothers, and he ex-pected his new series might last a year. Roach and, later, MGM produced Our Gang shorts until 1944. As "The Little Rascals," they are still being seen on televi-

But Our Gang came late in the era of silent comedy. What was it like at the beginning? Roach was 23 years old in 1915 when he hired his friend Harold Lloyd and produced and directed his first one-reelers.

"We'd pick people up on corners in an automobile." he says. "There was no script. The only set was a piece of canvas, and each one-reel short cost $350. We made one picture at the beach, one at an amusement park, one on a streetcar. It was the broadest kind of comedy. People were hit over the head. Somebody was al-Foot pressed down on the gas over the head. Somebody was al-pedal, he twists his way up the ways being thrown out of a scene point to the extras and say, 'You make up for a drunk. You make up for a cop. There would be a trash can in the park, so I'd tell our big tough guy to put it over the head of our little thin guy. Then the little thin guy would walk by the drunk who would think he was seeing things. He'd end by walking into the lake." Hal Roach left his home in Elmira, New York, at age 16 when his father told him to go see the world. His formal education had ended several years earlier when he was kicked out of both the local Catholic school and publie school. Before he showed up on a street corner in Los Angeles in 1912 and was picked as a cowboy extra, he spent a winter loading six-horse pack teams in Alaska, where "on a good day the temperature was zero." sold ice cream from a horse and wagon in Seattle and supervised 300 horses and 20 mule skinners on an oil pipeline. Although he was only 20 years old, he had spent enough time in the saloons and gambling dens on the Barbary Coast of San Francisco to tell the director that the movie croupier was spinning the roulette wheel wrong. By 3 P.M. he was a $5-a-day actor. Unlike Mack Sennett, Roach was able to accommodate his style to the more sophisticated audiences of the 1920s and 1930s. "At first we made pictures for nickelodeons, which were stores made into theaters," he says. Then the big shots began making features for 1,000-seat motionpicture palaces. We had to change. Sennett stayed with the same kinds of gags without stories. I began hiring writers. And before 1920 we were previewing our pictures. Audiences had to like the person who was throwing the custard pie. If we wanted audiences to like somebody, we did a special scene. Once Harold Llovd was broke and he had a hole in his sock. When he shined his shoe, he shined his leg to cover the hole. Once he was a doctor and he passed a little girl crying on the sidewalk and stopped to sew up her doll."

He is wearing a canary-yellow cardigan and brown panis with such huge plaids that a steam engine could race down the lines. There is a large R on his key chain, an R on his belt buckle, a diamond R clasp on his bright yellow tie.

He has outlived two wives, two of his five children, and the tworeel comedy shorts that were killed by the double feature. His biggest mistake, he says, was not following his hunch to create what he calls "streamline 45-minute comedy features." Instead, he followed the trend to featurelength films and did well enough with them until Pearl Harbor. Among the movies he directed was "One Million B.C." Among those he produced was "Of Mice

"But feature-length comedies need two stories," he says. "And the secondary story has to be as funny as the main story. Lloyd, Chaplin, all the others, were never as funny in features as they were in two-reelers, Keaton, Arbuckle, they could last at most 45 minutes doing what they did."

After the war, he turned to television with mixed success. In 1963, the Hal Roach Studios was torn down and replaced by an automobile dealership.

Hal Roach slips behind the wheel of the Buick and heads down the mountain in his daily game of tempting fate. The car. moves faster and faster. The curves come quicker and quicker. No foot touches the brake. More speed. More curves. A laundry van looms unexpectedly on the other side of the road. A squealing stop at the gates of the Bel-Air Country Club. For this afternoon, at least, silent comedy is prospering in California.

$10-Million Bonanza: Pizza With Everything

Inla Aaron says she and her husband. Robert, a freight handler who moonlights as a guard, might travel, pay off their cars and put some money away for the grand-children, but their only immediate plan for spending the United States's biggest lottery jackpot for a single winner — $10 million — is to "go out and buy a pizza," The 54-year-old New York City housewife. who prefers to call herself a "do-mestic engineer." claimed the prize Monday after officials spent the weekend puzzling over who the winner might be. She will get the $10 million in 21 installments of $476,190 which, after the 20 percent tax bite, comes to about $350.000 a year.

Yuri Lynbimov has been expelled from the Communist Party after an extended and outspoken stay in London, and there is dissension over his replacement in the theater he founded, an official Soviet source said Monday. There are many people in Moscow's Taganka Theater who seem to be against Anatoly Efros, who was chosen as Lyubimov's replacement as director, the source said. Lyubimov was fired earlier this month as head of the Taganka, the center of Soviet avant-garde theater since he founded it 20 years ago. The Taganka Communist Party cell expelled Lyubimov Friday. The official grounds were his prolonged ab-sence and "his actions" since he left Moscow, the source said.

A researcher who showed that the slightest genetic tremor can turn normal growth into cancer will receive this year's $50,000 Bristol-Myers award for achievement in cancer research. Robert Weinberg, a biologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is one of a small number of researchers responsible for an explosion in the understanding of cancer genes — bits of genetic material that lie in waiting throughout the body, ready to be activated to form cancer. The discoveries have led authorities to predict that the fundamental initiating events in cancer will soon be understood. Weinberg has shown that a change in a single chemical subunit - one of thousands in a cancer gene — can make a dormant cancer gene active and begin tumor.
